EP 0 491 298 A1: The invention relates to a scanning microscope having a light source, a light detector and two objectives which are situated on different sides of the object plane and illuminate an object point simultaneously. Means for varying the interference are arranged such that light which has passed through one of the objectives is superimposed on the object and/or on the photoelectric receiver by light which has passed through the objective arranged on the opposite side of the object plane, this superimposition being such that interference patterns are formed and it is possible to influence the interference patterns intentionally. A high resolution is achieved with this arrangement.
